

PRIVACY POLICY

Stallard Law is committed to protecting your privacy. We collect, hold, and handle your personal information in accordance with applicable privacy law and this privacy policy (which may be updated from time to time). By using this website, or engaging us, you acknowledge you consent to us collecting, storing, using and disclosing your personal information in the manner set out in this policy.

Information we collect

We collect personal information about you when you visit our website, engage us or request our advice, ask us to send you publications, or when you otherwise interact with us. If you give us personal information about someone else, then you must be authorised to do so and you must tell that person about this privacy policy.

Please be aware that the internet is not a secure environment. If you send us any information over the internet you send it at your own risk.

Stallard Law may also collect general information about site use, demand for relevant products, services, facilities and information, and related site information. This data will not include any information which personally identifies you.

If you do not provide us with certain personal information that we request, we may not be able to provide our services to you.

How we store your personal information

Stallard Law will hold your personal information for as long as your personal information is required for the purposes for which it was collected, and for as long as is necessary to comply with its legal obligations.

Stallard Law will use reasonable care to protect your personal information from unauthorised access, use, modification, disclosure, and loss.

In order to provide you with our services, Stallard Law may need to disclose and transfer your personal information to third parties located in a different country from where you live. This may include countries located outside New Zealand. If those countries do not have data protection laws comparable to the data protection laws of your country of residence, then Stallard Law will take reasonable steps to ensure that your personal information is protected in those countries.

How we use your personal information

We may use your personal information for the following purposes:

- if you are a client, engaging you as a client of the firm and providing our services to you (including engaging third party service providers on your behalf);
- checking legal or commercial conflicts;
- where we have your consent, emailing you updates, event invitations and publications that we think you may be interested in;
- when you apply to be employed, or contracted, by Stallard Law, for recruitment, employment and contracting purposes;
- complying with our legal obligations, including in relation to anti-money laundering and countering financing of terrorism legislation; and
- carrying out our internal business and administrative purposes, such as trust account transactions, credit management and debt recovery purposes.

We will not use or disclose any personal information for any other purpose without your consent, unless we are authorised, required or permitted to do so by applicable law.

In connection with the above purposes, we may disclose your personal information to our third party service providers.

Your rights

- If you would like to access your personal information we hold about you, or believe that any personal information we hold about you is inaccurate or out of date, please contact us at admin@stallardlaw.nz.
- If at any time you would like to be removed from any mailing list please contact us at admin@stallardlaw.nz or follow the unsubscribe link in the relevant message.
- If you think that your privacy rights have been breached, you can make a written complaint to Stallard Law at admin@stallardlaw.nz or otherwise contact the NZ Privacy Commissioner at <https://www.privacy.org.nz/your-rights/making-a-complaint/complaint-form/>.

Last updated: February 2024